CAPTAIN FRED RAU REACHES HAMPTON, VA.

Mrs. John Weber has received word that Captain Fred Rau, who left Jansville as first lieutenant of Company M, and who has been twice wounded, has arrived at Hampton, Virginia and is in a hospital there. Captain Rau will doubtless arrive in Jansville within a short time although it is expected he will go to Milwaukee first where his parents and wife are living first.

One Drink in Court: Charles Onell was the only offender to appear before Judge Maxfield in the municipal court this morning. He entered a plea of guilty to the charge of drunkenness and had his hearing adjourned until this afternoon.

REVEREND PIERSON GAVE FINE SERMON ON RECONSTRUCTION

A vigorous sermon on reconstruction was given after the war, was preached on yesterday morning at the Episcopalian church by Rev. Raymond G. Pierson, taking as his topic, "The Unfinished Task." In a preliminary talk he outlined the fact that although the joyful news had come of great victory, which we had been looking and praying for, yet when it came, we were just a bit unprepared for it. Almost as much so as we had been for war, without any preliminary warning. "People were asking themselves," he said, "what all this means, as it is the end of some things, and the beginning of others."

He emphasized the thought that many were inclined to sit back and think that the thing was done, and there was nothing more to be accomplished. That militarism had been humbled, and autocracy had been crushed, so there was nothing more to be done. "This idea," he thought, "was a source of great stress, there was apt to be the greatest mental and physical reaction, and these things must be guarded against."

Soon the peace conference will be held, and the task confronting these men, was perhaps greater than that of the great generals who had won the war. This was part of the unfinished task, which now confronted the nation. "It was said," he went on, "we were in danger of losing what we had already gained, unless we kept our purpose strong and our vision clear."

He said our picture was given of the task confronting our Food Conservation Board, in caring for the millions of starving peoples in Poland, foreign countries, Roumania, as well as in Russia and Germany.

He was sure that America with its great stores of food and unexampled generosity would take care of the food problems of the world.

Then there is the despoiled homes, the ruined villages, and wrecked industries, which will take much toil, labor and money to rebuild. These labor must take much thought and industry to solve their problems.

Then there is the general unhappiness arising from the war, and the differences between them must be bridged, and their differences reconciled.

Then there are nations bankrupt, with billions of debts facing them in the future.

These things form a task just now which almost stagger us, as we realize the problems of reconstruction, but just begun.

"This day of victory demands all the love, wisdom, patience, and fortitude of the nation, for the path of the future lies either in a future of exhausted humanity to rise up to the heroic plane of ideals, or the splendid work would be well accomplished."

He contended that the church had not been in vain, and that it was the providence of God that this nation should point the way to higher planes of living. The doors of responsibility had been wide open, and a new battle line of ideals and not of strife had been organized.

He thought that the church had a great opportunity at this time to walk on to its responsibilities, and do its part in the reconstruction of the people.

"The church must have a rebirth, which hinders mankind," he argued, "which hinders government, of individuals, and of political and industrial life were all wavering, and the church would only do its duty if it assisted in their solution."

He dwelt on the fact that Jesus came into the world to make things new, and that the church had not done its duty, unless it made service the law of life. When this task was accomplished there was the responsibility to the community to be considered. The condition of child labor should be looked into, the faults of immoral civic conditions improved, and the social relations of communities safe guarded.

Another of the unfinished tasks which he outlined was that of making nations new through military effort. "To establish schools and hospitals in foreign lands, so winning lives to Christ was one of the greatest of these tasks," he said.

He thought that the church would only be equal to its great task, when it was a church of selflessness and revived and quickened with new zeal and energy.

"That the churches must be united," was another thought dwelt on with much emphasis, and consecration to the task was insisted upon.

In closing he made a plea for consciousness of God's leadership and realization of the fact that either in the darkness of war, or the sunshine of peace, he is the supreme commander, and under his leadership, we can face the task with courage and go forward to better things.

An anthem was sung by the choir, "My Song, Shall be of Thee," by Harter, under the direction of Mrs. Thomas, while a duet, "Seek Ye the Lord," by Lansing, was sung by Mrs. Thomas and Alfred Olsen.

ANOTHER ARRESTED FOR LIQUOR GIVING

Lynn Meisner of Fort Atkinson Taken Into Custody on Saturday for Giving Booze to Soldier.

Lynn Meisner of Fort Atkinson was taken into custody by Officer Cain about six thirty o'clock Saturday evening for giving liquor to a Camp Grant soldier.

Meisner who is about twenty-five years of age stated that he did not give the liquor to the soldier, but upon reaching the station he changed his mind and stated that he might as well tell the truth. He then admitted that he had given the khaki clad man a bottle of liquor.

Meisner is being held at the station pending the arrival of Federal officers from Madison. He is the fourth man to be arrested in as many days for giving liquor to soldiers.

PHILOMATHIAN CLUB MEETING ON SATURDAY

The Philomathian Club held a meeting on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Claire Capelle on Prospect avenue.

Mrs. Mary Gibbons read a magazine article on "War Time Conditions in Jerusalem," by Chas. Whitehair. It gave an account of the redemption of the city from the Turks, and its gradual restoration to sanitary conditions, and to something like its old time ways.

Mrs. Farnsworth gave a paper on "German Spies," in which she showed that they had been unable to take very little of the Art Treasures out of that country. Most of it had been taken down and hidden by the Italians, when threatened by invasion by Germans.

Mrs. Munn gave a magazine article "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," which gave an idea of what was to be done to help the soldier after the army is demobilized. Supper was served at the close of the afternoon by the hostess.

The next meeting will be on next Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Carrie Koebelin, on Prospect avenue.

THE RETAIL DIVISION WILL HOLD MEETING

The Retail Division of the Chamber of Commerce will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the office of the Chamber. Several matters of importance to retailers will be discussed.

OFFICERS' SCHOOL AND DRILL THIS EVENING

There will be an officers' school and drill this evening for Company G of the 5th Inf., W. S. G. It is important that the officers and non-commissioned officers meet at seven-thirty at the armory and the company drill comes at eight. This is one of the preliminary drills for the very shortly specified that is expected very shortly.

CHAMBER DIRECTORS WILL INSPECT CADETS

The Directors of the Chamber of Commerce have been invited to inspect the High School Cadets tomorrow evening at the Armory at 7:30. The invitation was extended by Captain Baumann. Recently the board purchased 100 drill rifles for the cadets.

WILL ABOLISH TRAIN WHISTLING IN CITY

The Chamber of Commerce took up with the local agents of both railroads the matter of whistling and bell ringing of locomotives through and within the city. Assurance is had that all such noise will be curtailed to a minimum necessity to operation.

RE-CONSTRUCTION PERIOD IS NEARING

Today the United States Employment Service faces a task in facilitating re-entry of workers and soldiers in the normal industrial life.

Soon we will see our glorious defenders, the rivers of blood, the hospitals, and the prisons of sorrow, pain, and torture, and from the sights of the demoralized torture, the line of the demoralized with us and then will start the work of the reconstruction and reorganization, of which the United States Employment Service will become a vital factor.

The plan for placing disabled soldiers in industry is ready to operate. The men will be trained and placed in permanent situations. The physical disabilities will play no part in the positions they are to hold. Under the machinery for fitting the disabled to a successful career, the Federal board of vocational education will train and bring the men to the door of employment. The employment service through the cooperation of its 700 branch offices scattered all over the country will assist in every way in bringing the returned soldier and his job together.

In assisting the disabled men to secure desirable employment the Federal Board, as authorized and directed by the vocational rehabilitation act, will utilize as far as may be practical, the facilities of the department of labor. The opportunity for cooperation between the U. S. Employment Service and the Federal Board for Vocational Education is found in the recent report of men who have been retrained.

As shown by a recent canvass, the interesting information was revealed that jobs could be filled at the Ford Co. plant at Detroit, by cripples, to the following extent: legless men, 670; one-legged men 2,672; one-armed men 715, and by totally blind men 10.

The time required for cripples to become expert at these jobs is estimated as follows: for 1,743, one day or less; for 1,481 one day to one week; for 45 one month to one year, and for 45 one to six years.

About 18 per cent of all the employees at the Ford plant at the present time are disabled. Eighty-five per cent of them, however, are classified as fully efficient workers.

Nearly 5,000 returned soldiers, so many disabled that they could not return to their previous vocations, have been offered courses in industrial re-education by the Department of Soldiers Civil Re-education.

The experience of which organization has aided the United States War and Labor Departments and the Federal Vocational Board, is similar. This great number of men to graduate from courses in any one month was last June when the class numbered 286. The total number of graduates at that time had reached 727.

HARRY OLSON CALLED FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE

Harry Olson, 1208 Maple Court, a brother of Rev. Charles Olson of this city left this morning for New York city where he will receive final instructions here sailing for France as a Knight of Columbus secretary.

Mr. Olson received his call on Saturday to proceed to New York immediately for final instructions and to join the 10th Cavalry. He has been actively engaged in war work in this city and it has been his earnest desire since the entry of the United States into the conflict to get in the fray.

He is the second Jansville man to leave for work with the Knights of Columbus abroad.

Evansville News

Wade Van Wart. Evansville, Nov. 18.—The body of the late Wade Van Wart who died at Carlsbad, N. M., last Thursday, arrived in Evansville at an early hour this morning. The funeral will be tomorrow (Tuesday evening) at 3 o'clock, Rev. Smith of the Congregational church officiating. Neither the father nor the mother were able to accompany the remains to its final resting place, as Mrs. Van Wart is in such poor health she could not make the journey, nor could Mr. Van Wart leave her because of her illness.

Correcting an Error. The statement appearing in Saturday's paper to the effect that the meeting held in Magee's opera house last Friday evening was under the auspices of the Free Methodist church, is a mistake. The Free Methodist church, as an organization, had nothing to do with said meeting. The only conference of the Free Methodist church at its last session passed a resolution disapproving of its members dealing with stocks of a speculative character.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am nineteen years old and have an eighth grade education and as I have to work for my living I can't finish my education. I work for some very well-to-do people with fine educations, and that is what is worrying me. I feel so little and beneath and use big words. I don't know what they all mean and wouldn't know how to put them in form for a conversation.

Can you tell me how I can learn to do so? Are there any books I can buy that will help me, although I haven't the money to buy them. I have tried listening, but when I come to do so I can't remember what I should say and it embarrasses me. I feel that if I could associate with people like that as friends I could learn, but I feel beneath them and it makes me feel so.

POOR LITTLE LASS.

Read good books and keep a dictionary with you so that you can look up all words which puzzle you. Tell the principal at high school how much you regret your lack of education and ask him to help in selecting books of instruction. Although you are not in a position to attend school, he will help you to provide books and will be glad to give you advice when you need it. A librarian will also be of help to you. You can attend public lectures at night. A great deal of information can be gathered in this way and it will help you to understand the conditions of educated people.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty-one and am going around with two young men. One is a church goer and well liked by my family, and the other is rather wild, but my favorite. What shall I do? Shall I give up the friendship of the wild one and marry the young man who people like, or shall I remain true to the man I love and wait to see if he loves me?

In such a matter you should consult your own feelings and not marry a man because some one else happens to approve of him. It would be unwise to give your love to a man who is merely head-minded and pleasure loving there is no reason why you should give him up.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please suggest a remedy for my fern which is losing fronds very rapidly and turning yellow.

MRS. HAMLIN.

I would suggest that you report the fern, using new, rich earth and keeping the fern watered regularly. Once a week pour a teaspoon full of castor oil near the roots.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am an orphan and have been a stenographer for the past four years. I am getting very tired of office life and seem to have a knack for housework. Six months ago I became acquainted with a man who seems to be my ideal in every respect. We have grown very fond of each other and have talked of marriage, but he is not yet divorced from his wife, although they are separated and she is living in another state. Please tell me if you think I should give up the man, or if I should continue our friendship until he is in a position to marry me, as he assures me that he will fulfill his promise as soon as possible.

MISS B.

If the man's first marriage was unfortunate, and you and he are compatible, there is no reason why you should give up his friendship now. Be very careful how far your relationship ex-

THE STRUGGLE

TAKE AND GIVE.

Ferrol did not acknowledge in words how much he appreciated his wife's giving in to him. She had, perhaps, the best of the logic in giving in to him through sheer deep attachment through her intense reluctance to humiliate the man she loved. He reached out to her and took her hand where she sat on the arm of the chair. They sat in silence for a time. Then he asked:

"Are you finding it so hard to get along on what I make, Edith?"

The moment for confession had come. He assumed that she had tried to resort to the moving picture studio in order to make money for the children and the home. She had not had the courage to tell him that it was the strain her brother was making on her purse that had brought about the attempt which so humiliated her husband. But now that he had inadvertently asked the searching question, only the truth would serve.

"John," she said hesitatingly, "Of course, it is hard to get along with the cost of living rising more rapidly than our increase in income. Now the war has come and things are higher. I don't help with money directly, but carrying her brother any further. And she was ready to suffer the agony of telling Edgar of their decision."

Yet here was John letting her understand distinctly that he wanted her brother to stay with them. Not only that, but he even forbore to put the matter in words directly. The delicacy of his manner of giving, in return for her giving, touched her as much as the deed itself.

Married couples like the Ferrols do not show the demonstrativeness of springtime lovers. But the kiss that passes between them at such moments touches depths in the heart which it takes years of love and life to plumb.

away. Simply loosen with a knife blade the little prongs that hold the wick at the bottom and pull the wick up an inch above the holder and it is as good as a new one.

When this is burned down pull it up again, but this time it will probably not reach the oil. Take another old wick, cut off the required length to reach the bottom of the wick holder, then fit it in next to the other wick. In this way you can use the entire wick instead of throwing away at least two and one-half inches of wick left in the old holders, which always seemed such a waste.

TRIED RECIPES.

War Time Cookies—One-half cup melted butter substitute, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup honey, two tablespoons molasses, one egg, one teaspoon spices, mixed cinnamon, cloves, allspice, nutmeg, more cinnamon than of the others, a little grated orange peel, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons cocoa, one cup of sour or buttermilk, one cup white flour one small cup rolled oats, one teaspoon soda, teaspoon baking powder (level). Sift soda and baking powder with the flour three times, mix together in the order given. Drop by spoonfuls on baking sheets spread out with back of spoon and bake in a quick oven. To put a company touch to them put a little jam or jelly in center of each before baking. This makes 32 cookies.

Ox Tongue With Spinach and Rice (from above menu)—One can of ox tongue, one can of spinach or one and one-half pounds washed and cooked unpeeled, without water, one soft one cup rice. In a kettle of hot water heat thoroughly the cans of tongue and spinach before opening. This will take about half an hour. Open the can of spinach and drain through a colander; press out the spinach juice and save it for the spinach soup. Open the can of tongue and cook unpeeled, without water, in a spinach bordered with rice (which has been boiled and blanched) on a platter or shallow dish. Place the thin slices of tongue on the spinach. Sprinkle the rice with paprika and garnish with green or red peppers which have been cut into thin strips.

Mock Tomato Salad—Slice of onion, a bay leaf, blade of mace, half cup of green celery tops (chopped), one cup cold water, one tablespoon lemon juice, level teaspoon salt, five drops tabasco; add onion, bay leaf, mace, celery top to tomatoes and simmer 15 minutes; cover gelatin with half cup water. When tomatoes have finished cooking, stir in the gelatin, lemon juice, salt and tabasco; strain through sieve into small individual molds. Serve on nests of lettuce leaves.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

Miss Reilly will answer in this column all questions on etiquette

Some women are needlessly brusque and curt in their manner to conductors and are conspicuously thoughtless in allowing their children to monopolize space to which they are not entitled.

JESSIE: Yes, a diamond solitaire is always fashionable, but no sensible girl would expect one if her fiancé could not afford it.

GLADYS H.: If you will send me a three cent stamp I will be glad to send you a list of simple table manners. I cannot give names of books in this column, but you should be able to get a good book on etiquette at any book store.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

THE GIRL WHO USES HER HEAD

A certain amount of brains and a certain amount of good live muscle are good for a girl. In the class of girls you find swarming around dance halls the trouble is a deficit of both brains and muscle. These soft sisters are the ones who go a little beyond the fashion in everything. They are long on jewelry and short on skirts, extreme in every case, moderate in none.

Yet this is the very type of girl after which too many spoiled high school girls are patterned. Spoiled by mothers and pampered and humored by fathers.

It is nearly as bad to see a girl top-heavy with brains, almost round shouldered from the weight of thought, backed beyond all sense and reason, nervous as a spinster and endowed with the musculature of an invalid.

In the high school there should be a physical instructor who, besides presiding over the important department of physical education, should act in an advisory capacity for every student in the school. A student found delinquent in physical work, for instance, might be advised to drop one subject and apply the time instead to suitable physical training or rest or open air recreation or whatever might be necessary to overcome the deficiency. Such a plan would effectually squelch the silly race and rush for credits that ruins the health and whole future of too many girls in high school.

Girl athletes are by no means to be encouraged. That is not the end or aim of physical education. Your champion girl athlete is ungirlish, unwomanly, as a rule. Too much muscle is quite as undesirable as too much brain. There is a happy medium to strive for. Health and efficiency and endurance must not be confused with mere muscular strength. Athletes are feeble in their resistance to disease, short lived, lacking in endurance when lined up against persons with sound physical education in real life.

DAILY PRAYER.

Because we believe Thou hast led us forth, O Lord of hosts, our armies have taken the field against the servants of wrong; and upon Thy help we have relied for victory. Christ, who has heeded the holy call of Country and of humanity and God; and if any fail, most mercifully grant them, we entreat Thee eternal felicity with Christ the Saviour.

BREAD OR BOLSEHEVISM.

"Food Administrator Hoover has called for Europe to confer with the allied food controllers, and map out a program for the quick relief of the suffering of Europe. In an address to the federal food officials Tuesday afternoon he outlined the work before us," says an Eastern exchange.

"In some respects he finds the food situation fairly satisfactory, and in others not. He believes that within sixty days enough vessels will be released to carry supplies from the southern hemisphere, which would relieve the strain on wheat, corn and oats. There are others in the grain business not so optimistic as he, but as the administrator is in position to learn facts not available to most of us, great respect is due to his opinion.

"On this account, he believes that the use of wheat substitutes may be discontinued, but plainly states that high milling and extreme economy in the use of wheat will be necessary. If we indulge the taste for soft drinks and confectionery and use more sugar than at present, the people of Europe must do without. He has the right to ask our co-operation in this respect.

"But the greatest shortage is in fats. He asks a more sparing use of butter, lard and vegetable oils. There has been a steady depletion of dairy herds and of swine since the war, and soon we must be called upon to spare more. Milk is so necessary to child life that greater shipments than ever before must be made. The supply of meats and fats can be maintained only by a greater increase in production of hogs, and consequently of corn.

"If the people of the United States donate at any sacrifice asked for by Mr. Hoover because the war is over, they should look deeper into the situation. In spite of all that has been done there must be great suffering. famine will lay its hand this winter upon a Russian population at least half as large as that of the whole United States. At the best, little help can be given them."

"Central Europe is now on the verge of starvation. Hunger was the most powerful factor in the German collapse. We must recognize the fact that hunger breeds anarchy, and that the most effective weapon against Bolshevism is a loaf of bread. The people who have been under German domination also are in a pitiful condition. They too must be fed until they are self-supporting, if order is to be maintained in Europe.

"Only by a readiness to sacrifice in food supplies can terrible suffering be averted. Anarchy thrives in such conditions. Only by our food supplies can we now restore the reign of law and order to distressed Europe."

"The problem now comes up, why can not Australia, the Russian provinces that border on the Black sea, Argentina, and the South American republics help in this supply? Why confine the food requirements to the United States alone, when we have been told of the immense amount of foodstuffs in these localities that only needed shipping facilities and a raise in the blockade to furnish the hungry mouths in Europe?"

FORWARD.

Work has been resumed on the first unit of the General Motors Corporation plant. One of the first direct results of the signing of the armistice is the fact that the Secretary of War, Baker, announces that the plans for the demobilization of the fighting force of the United States, both at home and across the water, is progressing rapidly, and this means that hundreds of Janesville and Rock county boys will be home with us within a few days, some even before Thanksgiving.

It is a change in conditions in the industrial and business world and coming as it does in the very opening of the great boom that Janesville is to enjoy and the transformation that is coming from the new demand for labor by the establishment of the Janesville Machine company's tractor plant. It means a job for everyone, and still more men will be needed.

This armistice is one of the most wonderful events in the history of the world; in fact it was the best news in two thousand years, and it marks a new era in the business industry of the world. The responsibility for further financing the return of the troops, of keeping up of the various war essentials, is not, however, to be lost sight of, and while restrictions have been raised on certain commodities prices will not change materially, nor taxes be lessened for some time to come, at least not until a republican congress takes control of affairs next spring.

However, Rock county can not wait for that time. Short-handed, some of the most wonderful harvests in the history of the county have been garnered and more grain and food supplies must be raised during the year when the labor and money will be solved by the return of our soldiers in time for work in the field. In the city of Janesville we must prepare for the future thousands of workmen who are to be called here by the new factory opening and to meet this hundreds of thousands of dollars for new buildings must be spent.

Buildings that are sanitary, that have modern accommodations, that are not the crowded tenements of manufacturing cities, but real, genuine homes. The Chamber of Commerce has this work well in hand and can be depended upon to solve it. In fact plans are already under way, under the direction of Secretary Green of that organization, to make final arrangements for such homes that will meet with the government requirements.

While the war is over there are still many questions to be solved and we must meet another Liberty Loan, this time for probably five billion; future contributions for the Rock County War Chest fund before war conditions actually are to be settled and peace days return. We must expect it, and meanwhile we must look "Forward" and into the future for a bigger and better Janesville, under more modern and more sanitary conditions.

WHAT IS COMING?

One political writer states that we may expect a cyclonic disturbance in our state very shortly. Intimating that the democrats have not forgiven Wisconsin citizens' refusal to obey the mandate of the President last spring and elect Davies senator over Lorroot or vote for the democratic congressman. There is but one way this can come about, and that is for the democrats, desperate at the loss of the United States senate, forcing an issue on the La Follette investigation and voting for his withdrawal from office. This would mean a United States senatorial campaign in the state, with La Follette seeking vindication at the hands of the voter, doubtless opposed by some other republican, and the chance that in the bitter fight that will follow a democrat might be elected, thus making the republican control of the senate doubtful if they could unseat one of the two other republican senators whose seats they apparently will make a strong protest against. This La Follette question is scheduled to come up within a few weeks so we may expect some fireworks, perhaps, or it may only be a fizzle like a burnt-out fire-cracker.

Most of the people who regard baseball as a frivolous waste of time are now faithfully hustling to get money for themselves, while 55 per cent of the American League ball players have gone into the army and navy.

It is not likely that the girls will keep the soldiers' jobs they have taken, when the boys get home. But there will be no protest when they get jobs now occupied by slackers.

The girls who are painting china and embroidering forget-me-nots are reminded that 25,000 nurses are going to be urgently needed in the army hospitals before next summer.

It is not necessary for workers in essential industries to celebrate the American victory so intensively that they will delay getting food and other supplies to the soldiers.

After worshipping their Kaiser while he was gaining victories, the Huns say they shouldn't be punished for their crimes because the Kaiser was to blame.

If it was not absolutely necessary for some people to have meat three times a day, perhaps the rest of us could occasionally have it for dinner.

The newspapers will seem queer without war news, and with nothing to put a 96-point headline onto but a lie in the coal sheds.

Everyone is hollering to have prices put down, and the popular theory of how to accomplish it is to get your own wages put up.

Having exhorted his soldiers to die in the last ditch for him, ex-Kaiser Bill packed up a suit case and ran for Holland.

After sinking half of the food-carrying ships, the Germans will now be begging us to give them some food.

Society notes from the winter resorts. Mr. William Hohenzollern is staying in Holland for his health.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

The scientists are having a great how-do-you-do... Over the pleasant art of kissing. Again they want it abolished, claiming that it spreads the "flu." "When is a kiss essential?" They ask, and they answer "Never." We seldom agree with scientists. And this time they are wrong again. There is one kiss That is absolutely And irrevocably essential—The one you give Your soldier boy When it comes home.

When the final settlement is made we do hope Spain will be penalized for spreading the "flu" propaganda and Sweden for sending us all those punk matches.

Our idea of the very limit of indignation and the height of subsequent punishment of a certain w. k. kuttur was expressed by a lady friend of ours in Elmhurst yesterday when she said: "The Kaiser should get what is coming to him. I am so indignant at that man that I would like to slap him right in the mouth."

Just Folks

HIS PARENTS' CONCOLATION.
Against the dangers that we dread—Against the word that he lies dead, If it should come, we have the pride of knowing that he put aside All selfish pleasures and was glad To give the flag the best he had.

Against the absence, long and grim, We keep the manly soul of him; Balanced against the hurt and ache That longing for our boy must make This consolation was most true; That he was unafraid to go.

Great though our grief shall be if he Shall never more come home from sea More keenly we'd have felt the pain If he had chosen to remain. This golden thought shall soothe our woe; In such a need he wished to go.

If it must be that he shall fall, His spoken words we can recall. When time has dried our bitter tears His voice shall speak throughout the years

And we shall hear him whispering low: "Far worse than death were not to go."

INTERRUPTS HIS FUNERAL BY WIRING TO "WIDOW"

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]
Springfield, Mass., Nov. 18.—When Charles Tift, son of the city treasurer and a former broker of this city, was taken ill with influenza at Camp Zachary Taylor, the man on the hospital cot next to him died. Through some mistake the dead man was listed as Mr. Tift and the body shipped home following a telegram announcing Mr. Tift's death. The family was rushed at Mr. Tift's home to comfort his supposed widow when a telegram came from the real Mr. Tift saying that he was recovering from his illness, and was coming home on a furlough.

FIVE FRIDAYS

By FRANK R. ADAMS
Copyright by Frank R. Adams Company.

"It's Johnson's launch," said Mrs. Green. "I can tell because it misses every tenth explosion."

"Lipton S. Clair says that fasting makes all the senses extraordinarily acute," Lucile explained.

I know Mrs. Green said — Lipton S. Clair? "under her breath, but I did not hear it."

"I wonder what Johnson's boat can be doing out here at this time of night," Lucile speculated.

"He must be bringing some one over here," said her mother. "Ours is the only island for miles which is inhabited as late as this in the season."

"It can't be father," Lucile mused. "He said he wouldn't be home until Sunday."

So we went down to the dock. It was moonlight, and the old launch coming in looking so way romantic. What was she bringing us? Something within me suggested food.

The launch came alongside; a man with a couple of grips jumped ashore; then the boat backed away and limped off again into the darkness.

"Why, Frank Bopp?" exclaimed Lucile, greeting the newcomer. "We weren't expecting you until next week."

"I know it," he said, "but I got two weeks' vacation instead of one, and I thought I'd be welcome, so I grabbed the first train, and here I am."

"Of course you are welcome," Lucile was wondering how she was going to break the news of the fasting to him.

"How are you, Monty?" He halted me with the nickname I most detest and slapped me on the shoulder blade where the sunburn was the worst.

I assured him politely, but untruthfully, that I had never felt better.

"Then we went back to the house. All I had needed was the presence of this mosquito to be absolutely miserable. He knew more different ways of getting on my nerves, even when I was well fed, than any other individual in the world. I hated to think what the next few days would be like with Bopp and hunger for my companions."

"Believe me," Bopp was saying, "I had some dinner on the dining car this evening. There was some fried chicken, with biscuit and gravy, mashed potatoes, corn on the cob—"

"Isn't the moon beautiful?" interrupted Lucile. Even she could stand no more.

"Looks like a great big pumpkin, doesn't it?" Bopp blundered.

I am going to put a new verb in the dictionary—namely, "to Bopp," meaning to speak at length on any annoying subject.

Finally Lucile took him one side and explained about the fasting. The idea fascinated him, especially in its application to me. He offered to wager me huge sums of money, which neither of us possessed, that I couldn't last for a week, and if I did he wanted to open a pool on my probable weight and waist measurement at the finish. You can imagine how much his talk amused me.

CHAPTER II.
After the arrival of Mr. Bopp, when we got back to the house, Lucile passed every one a glass of water. Bopp, with mock alarm, would not let me drink mine.

"Wait till I get a tire gauge," he said, "and see if Monty can stand another glass without bursting an inner tube."

"Don't be funny," interposed Lucile. "About tomorrow you'll feel the way Mr. Blainey does now."

"Why?"

"Any one does after fasting the first day."

"Me fast?" Bopp laughed a clear ringing laugh. "No, thank you. I don't go in for those fads. I think I can have more fun watching Monty do a gradual disappearing act."

Lucile didn't tell him then that there was no food in the house, and I joyfully refrained, for fear of spoiling one little jot of the pleasure I would have in watching him when he discovered it for himself the next morning at breakfast.

"I'm going to bed," I announced stiffly.

"Are you sleepy so soon?" asked Lucile.

"Not sleepy, but very tired," said I, looking pointedly at Bopp. "I think I may read awhile."

I started to get a glass of water.

"Pass Monty the boiler compound," said Bopp. "He's getting full of lime."

"Good night, Mr. Blainey," said Lucile sweetly, to make up for the boor's rudeness.

I held her hand for an instant. "Good night, Miss Green." Then as I turned to go up the stairs I mumbled, "Good night, Bopp."

"Good night, Monty," he returned.

"Gee, for your sake I hope we don't have a frost tonight or you are apt to burst."

I went upstairs and slammed my bedroom door. At last I could be alone with my misery. After I got into bed I tried lying on my back, on my side and on my stomach. It was no use; I could not sleep.

At last I heard the others coming upstairs to bed. I wondered if he had kissed her good night in the hall.

Some one knocked at my door.

"Come in," I growled.

Bopp stuck his head in at the door. "Excuse me, Monty," he said. "I saw a light under your door, and, thinking you might be awake, I brought you a book to read."

He tossed a volume on my bed, withdrew and shut the door.

I wondered if I had misjudged the man. It certainly was decent of him to bring me a book. I picked up the volume, read the title and threw it at the door he had just closed.

It was "The White House Cookbook."

In an hour or two it was daylight once more, and I dressed my emaciated figure with care, inserting a precautionary safety pin hither and yon in the folds which were once the waist line of my garments. Early as I had risen, Lucile was downstairs almost as soon as I was. We had our tupples standing and at separate times.

"Shall we waken Mr. Bopp?" I asked.

"I should hate to have him miss any of this glorious day."

"No," vetoed Lucile, who suspected my motive. "The beauty of fasting is that it relieves one from all the restraint of convention. We are not tied down to meals, to regular rising and retiring. Every one may consult his own convenience in the matter. You choose to arise and glory in nature; he prefers to dream."

"There were sounds of some one stirring upstairs."

"Frank is up," announced Lucile with relief. I think she knew there was a storm coming and was glad to get the suspense over with.

Bopp sang as he dressed. I never care for a person who is cheerful before breakfast. It always seems to me as if the person puts it on to irritate others.

The melody which Bopp dressed himself by was "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," and then as an encore he favored himself with "The Old Oaken Bucket" and "Swanee River." After that he was entitled to all that was coming to him.

He came downstairs smiling and asked pleasantly, "Have you been out to pump your breakfast yet, Monty?"

When he noticed that Lucile was in the room he made no further allusions to eating or water. Then he went out into the kitchen. When he returned his face wore a puzzled expression.

"Do you know where the maid is?" he inquired. "I thought I'd ask her to make me a cup of coffee."

"The maid is taking a vacation," I answered hastily, for fear Lucile would rob me of the pleasure of telling him. "She won't be back for a week."

"Oh!" He received the blow with open mouth. After a moment he recovered. "You won't mind, will you, Lucile, if I get myself a bite?"

"I wouldn't mind in the least," she answered, "but there isn't a thing to eat in the house."

"Nothing to eat?"

"No. That's so we wouldn't be tempted to break our fast."

I sauntered casually over to the piano and with one finger picked out "I'm on the Water Wagon Now."

Bopp was too stunned to notice it much.

"What shall I do?" he yelled, with all the rage of a regular man deprived of his breakfast.

Dinner Stories

A certain stage manager, noted for his ambitious demands in regard to scenery and stage effects, yet who was equally satisfied with the most meager provision, said one morning to the lessee of a wooden booth in a small town:

"In the first act I shall require a regiment of soldiers on the right, a posse of policemen on the left, and a crowd of peasants on the bridge in the center. Now, how many supers have you?"

"Two, sir."

"To which he composedly replied: "That will do beautifully."

This story was told by a soldier after a two weeks' stay at a base hospital after an attack of the measles.

A nurse went around and took the temperature of the sick soldiers, and while her back was turned one soldier, instead of putting the thermometer into his mouth, inserted it in a cup of hot coffee standing near. He handed the thermometer to a passing doctor, who first looked at it and then at the patient.

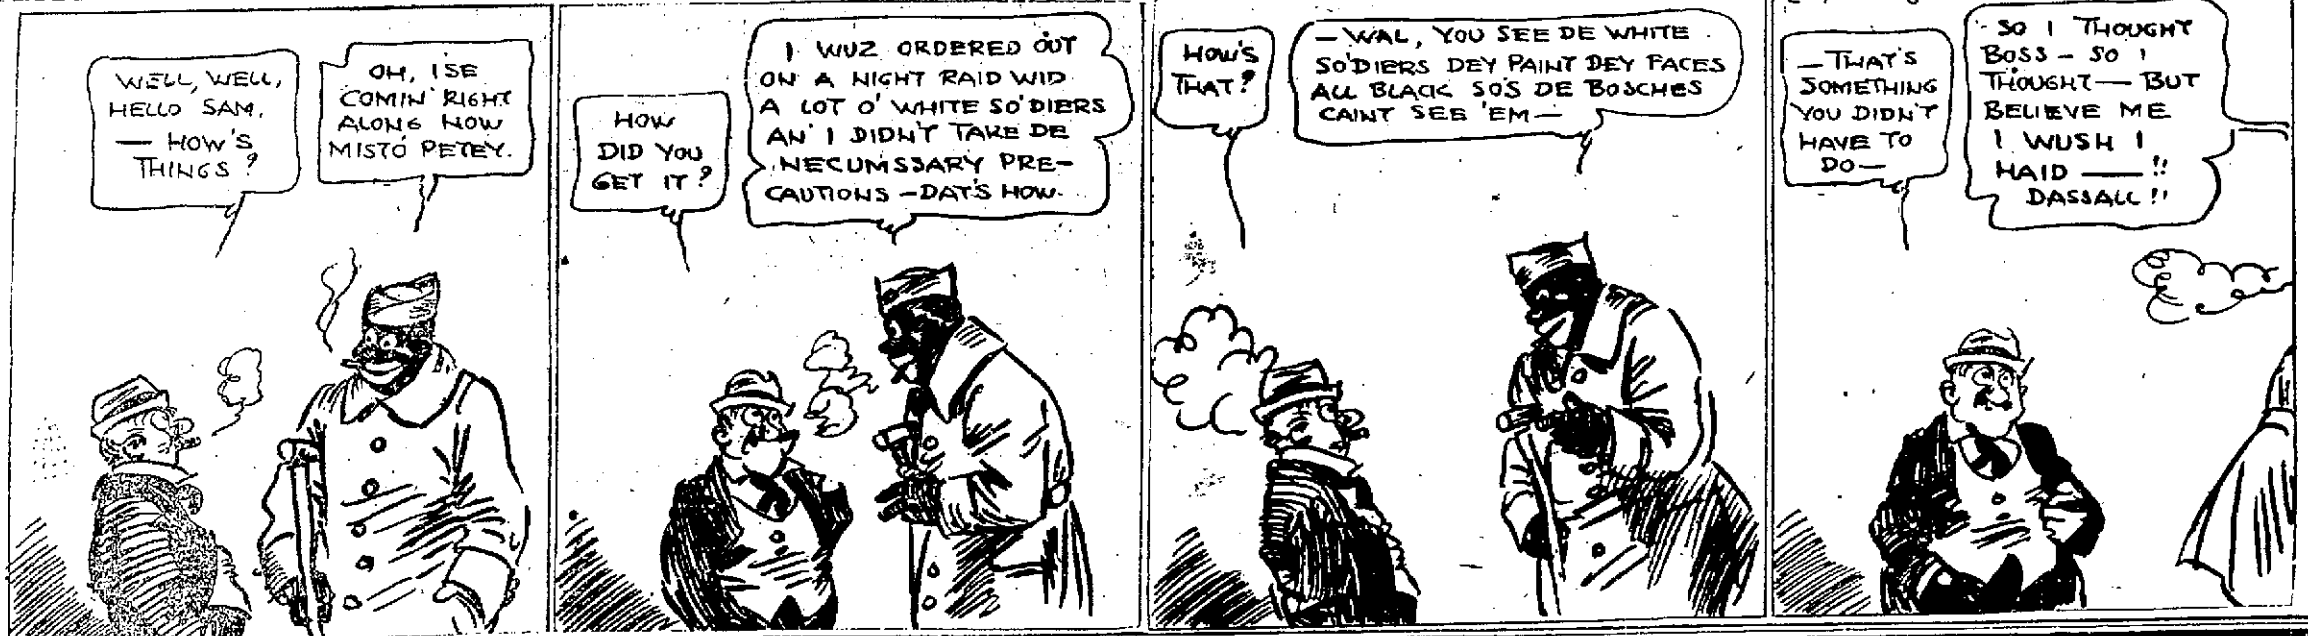

"My boy," he exclaimed, "you are not dead, but ought to be."

The thermometer registered 120 degrees.

A sergeant having in charge a squad of recruits was drilling and explaining to them the use of the rifle. The lesson covered instructions in how to load the rifles and blank cartridges were being used. At the order to "stand ready," all the men placed themselves in the correct position to await the command of "fire at will." One rookie failed to comply. He lowered his gun and asked, "Which one is Will?"

Will became associated with Applington. The Kappa Delta Sigma, one of the sororities of Lawrence college will become associated with the national organization of Kappa Delta. Miss Mathers, national president of the Kappa Delta is in the city to take charge of the installation. The local sorority was organized at Lawrence in 1877. There are now five national sororities in the college of Liberal Arts and two in the conservatory.
